I can't begin to imagine how kind and considerate this group has been in letting me publish one of their articles free, but I think it is a good thing that a group of Christians who are willing to explore the ideas of what is going on in our world and put together something of interest to others. I plan to be sharing more of their web site and I hope that you will stop by to see what they have to say. Thanks in advance for your time and a good read! (I'll have more later on.) Thank you for hosting the daily newsletter. Thank you for putting together a web site that is so concise and well laid out. These are the days of web sites that so many times you are past the point of it being user friendly and want to go find the solution you are looking for rather than have an easy way for others to find it. You are a breath of fresh air and I look forward to your web site being a resource for the Christian community. Sincerely, Rob Hammer, Pastor I am happy to let you know that I have just added your web site to my daily email. I enjoy the web site and the daily newsletter as it gives us all a chance to read an article about the Christian faith. With God's help, we will see a renaissance of Christendom.Type 2 Diabetes -- Knowledge Levels of Primary Care Physicians in Turkey. There is little data on type 2 diabetes in Turkey. A new combo system has been added where after doing a move while at the end of the combo, you can hit a button and Bebop will stick to the combo and attempt to kill enemies more efficiently. Hitting a button on the ground will start the bebop combo, and hitting another button before it completes will cause the combo to fail and perform a new combo. This allows for simple combo flow and allows Bebop to perform more complex combos by jumping in the air. After activating a combo, the music will continue to play even while Bebop has not hit any buttons. New music has been added to give a cue to the player that the combo is being initiated. Instead of Bebop getting stuck on the ground, a nimble dodge will be executed. New and old music have been mixed to bring the style into the game. In the new game mode, the original Bebop will have a pink color instead of his original blue color, and moves will be more intense. Some of Bebop's default combos have been rewritten to make them easier to perform. Due to the change in color scheme, the music is dark and edgy. Bebop's original attacks will be present, but the added more intense attacks. During battle, enemies will be quick to die. Different colors will signify your character. Levels have been remixed to include new effects and more challenging obstacles. Minor alterations have been made to the existing level difficulty. New enemy behaviors and responses have been added. A new combo feature has been added to allow for some more creative and risky play. New environments will also make use of the same new boss encounters. New items and materials have been added. Certain levels have been remixed. The score has been changed to allow for more creative and varied score-based play. An in-game level editor will allow players to create levels of their own or download existing levels from the level database on the website. A new "Bebop" costume will be available for purchase at level 25. Secret Ninja Characters will also be added. A new ball that will change colors to let you know if you are hit has been added. Some new items will be available from certain treasure chests. There are new characters to try out. New

What's new:

(GRC), a proposed 1,000 megawatt dam and power station on the Zamora River, owned by the international engineering and surveying consultancy Syska Hennessy (SHS), is situated in the heart of the giant Cocos Islands, an archipelago in the Indian Ocean. If it were to be built, it would be a major power station that would not only provide energy to the Cocos Islands, but also to the wider Australian electricity market, and to the global market through its Interconnector Coral Sea link with Papua New Guinea. Australia's Minister for Environment Josh Frydenberg was on hand and the usual suspects showed up in force: the government's think tank the Institute of Public Affairs, an unnamed group of small-to-medium businesses, and even retired senior public servants. Frydenberg stood up to make his pitch to the "tyranny of expert consultation" that was eroding public trust in government decision making. Man-made climate change, which disempowers local communities, allegedly led to this development decision where the Gold River power project would go ahead anyway. The local Indigenous people of the islands were also not consulted, as they too would be affected, either socially or financially. The "tyranny of expert consultation" is a tried and tested political tactic made popular by Tony Abbott. It has been used by successive Liberal and Labor governments to justify all kinds of climate-related decisions they regret. An Independent Australia is critical of the shift to this style of politics, including its application to climate issues. Gold River is just one of a number of climate-related developments causing deep disappointment to Indigenous people but passed anyway at the behest of government agencies, or under the guise of protecting the environment. A host of places in the Northern Territory are now home to dirt-cheap solar and wind power, but also the dumping of mining waste. A proposed revision of the environment laws in Western Australia has turned into an open assault against Indigenous people, bringing new people into environmental court. In South Australia, CSIRO's Chief Executive Larry Marshall pulled the rug out from under the shadow minister who was responsible for Indigenous policy. In the Northern Territory, and recently across the country, Indigenous communities have been flushed by the Dalrymple Government's Environment Restoration Fund. These are just a handful of examples, but they all have one thing in common: Indigenous Australians have not been informed of developments that might affect them
